

Chickenpox Usually Mild Disease But Shouldn't Be Taken Lightly

By ROY O. GILBERT
Los Angeles County
Health Officer

Chickenpox is a mild disease that almost everyone gets at one time or another. Probably the chief danger from the infection is due to its very mildness, which somehow inclines adults to regard chickenpox too lightly, whether it occurs to themselves or their children.

Children are normally expected to contract chickenpox before or during school days, and there is ordinarily no reason for keeping a healthy child away from possible sources of infection—very young or weak children should be protected against exposure to all infectious diseases. In any case, a physician should always be called in for a diagnosis and medical supervision even when the symptoms are most mild.

possibility of smallpox should be kept in mind, especially by those persons who have not been vaccinated since infancy. Prompt medical care also becomes of the utmost importance if a kidney infection, encephalitis, or a secondary pneumonia should occur.

The rash is usually quite irritating, and youngsters have a tendency to scratch the blisters and scabs. Efforts should be made to discourage such scratching, for permanent scars often result if the lesion becomes infected.

Very Contagious
Chickenpox is very contagious, being spread from one person to another by secretions from the patient's nose and mouth, or by handling articles contaminated either with the secretions or material from the skin blisters.

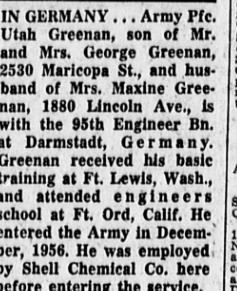

In some cases, the individual coming down with chickenpox has a slight fever, headache, and loss of appetite for a day or two before the rash develops; in another person, rash may be the first symptom. The rash, which occurs in successive crops, usually appears first on the trunk, then on the face, and in severe cases over the entire body. Eruptions, resembling small ulcers, may form on the lining of the mouth and throat.

It is true that serious complications accompanying chickenpox are uncommon, but they do happen. One complication, more common among adults than among children, is called primary chickenpox pneumonia. This is an acute, severe pneumonia occurring during the course of chickenpox and is caused by the chickenpox virus. The patient with this condition usually has a widespread rash, a cough that produces blood-streaked sputum, and a high fever. Although recovery is generally assured with proper medical care, the individual may nevertheless become acutely ill.

Not Quarantinable
There is no specific treatment for chickenpox, nor is there an immunizing agent. Although the disease is not quarantinable, children are excluded from school for at least six days after the first appearance of the rash and until the initial scabs have dropped from exposed parts of the body. One attack of chickenpox usually confers immunity. Second attacks are rare.

Greenan received his basic training at Ft. Lewis, Wash., and attended engineers school at Ft. Ord, Calif. He entered the Army in December, 1956. City Promotes Recreation Program for All Residents

The City of Torrance operates a year-round recreation program of diversified activities for all ages and interest groups on four park areas, 12 school grounds, two high school gymnasiums, the new municipal plunge, the adult center, and the civic auditorium.

For the senior citizens, a large adult recreation center program is carried on in the Central Torrance area. Club meetings, table games, horse-shoes, and shuffleboard are the leading activities for the older groups.

An idea of the scope of the adult program is best illustrated by the fact that last year the recreation department's Square Dance Club joined the American Square Dance Assn. with nearly 200 members, the largest club ever to join the American Square Dance Assn. in the United States.

Other organized adult activities include softball, baseball, volleyball, and basketball leagues and various activity clubs, such as tennis, drama, art, and dog obedience classes, to mention a few.

Full Program
A full program of activities for youth is made possible by a cooperative agreement between the City of Torrance and the Torrance Unified School District, whereby school recreation facilities are put to full use. This agreement, first executed in 1951, has made possible city-wide leagues in all sports, traveling amateur talent shows, square dance classes, arts and crafts classes, day and overnight camping programs, and many other fun events that attract children by the thousands.

This program for children, originally set up for summer only, has grown into a busy year-round program. Attendance figures on these areas for the fiscal year 1955-56 was 479,883; attendance figures since July 1957 already exceed that amount.

There are many unusual features to the Torrance recreation department program. An agreement with the school district has permitted the organization of a leadership training class for high school seniors whereby the students in the class not only receive school credit but also are paid as recreation leaders in the department.

Already mentioned were the amateur talent shows held on SWIMMING FACILITIES... Spectators watch many young Torrance residents take advantage of the new municipal plunge. The pool offers not only many hours of sport and relaxation for children and adults, but also is the scene of swimming lessons, aquacades and other water spectacles.

each area with traveling shows being organized among the youth, and tours arranged throughout all the City playgrounds, with a special week end show in the Torrance Park band shell. Another part of the program is the Torrance Adult Club, the first, and one of the few adult clubs in the United States, incorporated as a non-profit group.

Creative Spirit
The theme of all programs for children has been to encourage creativeness. In addition to the arts and crafts program and the drama programs organized for youth along the creative lines, there has also been a creative interpretive dance class held during the summer months.

The Torrance recreation department program, although having a difficult time keeping up with the rapid growth of the city, has found the job of serving the community needs made easier through the extensive utilization of youth leaders in the community. Both as paid recreation leaders and as volunteer group leaders, Torrance youth have responded to the call for imaginative assistance in fulfilling the leisure time needs of their own friends and neighbors.
